THE TIE THAT BINDS

by Dale Jenkins

Good morning. Welcome to God's Place. First up, today we welcome the Graham family. Dave and Nora, and their two children Bryson (5th grade) and Laurel (3rd grade) — are really neat folks and I hope you will get to know them. After some time studying together they were both baptized yesterday. We welcome them to the Family here!

On behalf of those who help with The Pantry, I want to thank you. The way you respond to every need, to every request, your over and above approach, your commitment to finding a way to do well - keep it up! You did a great job of providing funds for the turkeys as well as filling the bags with the specific items and returning them so we could distribute them in a timely manner. This church is filled with some truly remarkable servants. Thank you.

Our Shepherds meet each week on Wednesday night. These meetings are open to anyone. If an individual wants to meet with them in private they will dismiss all of us interlopers, but outside of that sort of thing, you can come. I do. I wish you could hear our elders' passion, their compassion, the way they agonize over hard decisions, the way they try to let every voice in this church be heard, their commitment to trying to meet each need. I wish you could hear them pray. Praying over a very lengthy list and knowing the needs that have been expressed. I wish you would see them correct each other, disagree with each other, then laugh with and love each other. I wish you could understand the challenge of making decisions that affect 450-500 souls knowing that there will be those regardless of the decision made, who without the context and all of the information will second guess and even undermine those decisions. I wish you could know how fallible they know they are and how they often make the wisest decision they know how to make knowing it may not be the best decision. I wish you could know how much they love each member of this Flock. I wish each one of you could see them as the shepherds, under the Chief Shepherd that they are.
